Of those rare treats where you're not reading for the big bad ass fight scenes or dark brooding characters who just wanna hurt someone. Nope, this is a series that shows Matt Murdock trying to live life in a new happy direction while also trying to convince the general public he's not Daredevil.

Mark Waid brings a new take on Daredevil, and its one I'm surprised no one ever thought of until now. Marcos Martin and Paulo Rivera are the two artist for this first story arc and they also contribute to the quality of the title.

While respecting all that came before, Waid managed the almost-unheard of trick of moving Daredevil out of the shadows and into a less-angsty environment at the same time keeping characterization from previous runs of the book.

This is the fifth volume of Waid's turn on Daredevil,
and I think his best TPB
'til now. In it the storyline of who's screwing
with Daredevil gets resolved
and in a very awesome way.
In retrospect, thinking of everything that happened in some of the previous TPBs,
who was behind it did make perfect sense. Hindsight is always 20/20 in comics.

Mark Waid and Chris Samnees run on Daredevil is different from the years and years of Daredevil comics before because for the most part it isnt constantly dark, tragic, and obsessed with kicking its hero while its down. This run has a happy end for once and the ending really pulls it all together. Its a bit sloppy, yes.

In volume Five, Mark Waid continues his run on Daredevil. I find it interesting that while there is an obvious love interest here, the relationship that has been the focus of Waid's run so far is that of friendship, between Matt and his best friend/law partner Foggy Nelson.
